FAIRFIELD UNIVERSITY
FAIRFIELD, CONN.

REV. LAURENCE C. LANGGUTH, S.J.

Dean

Dedication

THAT FAIRFIELD is the college it is today, only five years after its beginning, must be attributed to the labors of the original devoted group of men who founded it. Foremost among the original educators, in diligent and strenuous effort, is our present Dean, Rev. Laurence C. Langguth, S.J.

We the students, naturally unconcerned with the complexities besetting the government of a small college, and a newly founded one as well, are inclined to accept the Dean as a high authority and nothing more. But in the shadow of great secular schools, in the cloudiness of modernistic thought, our Dean, while attending to the frequent onerous details demanded of an administrator, has found time to assert uncompromisingly our college's belief in first principles and in Christianity.

He has exerted himself for the further recognition of our young university among older, established halls of ivy. While holding fast to the scholastic tradition of education, he has not hesitated to adopt new ideas, when worthy, to our Fairfield system. At the same time — and this is our reason for accolade — he has always remained human and close to the students, making it his personal duty to evaluate personally the talents of each one. In later years, when the history of our college is written, the name of Father Langguth will take its deserved place, high on the roll of distinctive service.

WHAT WE REMEMBER

In late September of 1948, we wouldn't want to be pressed for details, the historians remind us that as freshmen we registered, paid fees, bought our books, and attended the opening Mass of the Holy Ghost. Cloud-wrapped as we were, we wouldn't recall exactly how we felt or who was who, but there are some details that remain.

Our Dean, Father Langguth, we do recall, addressed us with a welcoming speech to Fairfield, emphasizing the need for traditions in college life and reminding us that we must help in establishing them. That gave us an introductory sense of responsibility. And then Father Rector, according to a tradition which we had no hand in and which, shall we say, we generally approved, proclaimed a "Schola Brevis," a term that even those who knew little Latin seemed to understand.

Let the psychologists tell us why we remember what we do, but that is another problem than ours. Here is the "what." There were the first few days of classes made more fascinating than they were intended to be by a shortage of blackboards and the necessity of walking to Berchmans for lunch. Some preferred the more apt adjective, "droll." The time that it took to become familiar with the unique system of room numbers — 101 for a first floor room and 202 for a second — seemed endless for the less mathematically inclined, but this was a minor difficulty soon forgotten in the maelstrom of assignments.

Outside of classes what happened? The mimeographed Fulcrum appeared on the table in the first corridor, Sodality meetings began, and at the end of October we had a Harvesting Dance in Berchmans. A DeSante trio performed for our young and holy group — somewhat appositely, we thought — while Jerry Mohyde, Jim Linehan, Bob Walsh, and Jack O'Connor were responsible for committee arrangements.

Our track team defeated Providence, and a basketball rally in December, prior to the Pratt game, was what they call a "resounding" success because of the acoustics arrangements in the Berchmans auditorium. That fifth period rally, by the way, seemed abnormally late in the afternoon for those who were accustomed to disappearances after the third hour, but now with machinations of the devil called the seventh hour we realize there was nothing to complain about. A fight song, written by Coach Dunn, became our "Men in Red" and the college's signature on radio and Glee Club programs. Cheerleaders Bill McGrath, Dave Barry, and Joe Forte were as hoarse as Citation.

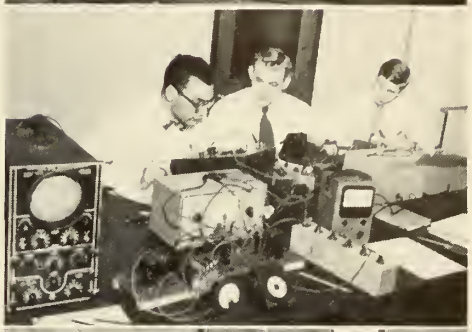
Well, the mid-term exams came and went — as is their wont — and then we had the consolation of a retreat with Father Hogan to take razor-and-gun thoughts from our minds. "What doth it profit a man . . . ?" was a familiar Xaverian quotation we all remembered. We weren't gaining the whole world, we insist, when we danced at the mid-winter carnival to Al Gentile's music shortly afterwards, thinking without compunction that St. Francis would not have minded our few hours of pleasant relaxation.

Then there were new cafeteria arrangements, a bazaar for the building fund, and a new student council constitution that took up our interests. Rhetoric and its inherent diplomacy were helpful to the Public Affairs Club when it went to Hartford for the Connecticut Intercollegiate Student Legislature.

Between classes and a cornucopia of work we managed to take interest in the formation of the Waterbury Club, the first of such regional seances, the performance of the Microphone Players in a thing called "The China Cat" — 'Fur-raising' said Variety — and the Glee Club's appearance at New Haven over WNHC as well as at St. Andrew's Home . . . wherever that might be. We had no doubts, however, that they were sensayshunal.

An outsider might think, and you can't blame him, that all we were interested in was dances and sports. The Knights of Xavier came up with an April affair with Joey Sal's orchestra, and the spring prom — a Ronnie Rommel routine — was arranged by John O'Connor, Bob Walsh, Kendall Murphy, and John Reilly at the Glorieta Manor. The baseballers tied the score in a game with Bridgeport, and our track and basketball teams conducted themselves like gentlemen as well as sports.

Of course, our primary interests were academic. President Harold Mullen, Vice-President Joe Kehoe, Treasurer Fred Tartaro, and Secretary Charlie Vernale became our elected officers; Father Wilkie formed a Biology Club, and exams again had a way of looming at us. Fortified with the reassurance that previous freshmen had gone through it all, we began our resorting of the semester's notes, somehow completed the two interrogatory weeks, and submitted to the sweating-out period known as the "pre-mark jitters."



For some there was a summer of vacation, and for others a recapitulatory period spent by the sound near beautiful Fairfield University, in the foothills of the Berkshires. But for all, on our return, there was a new Dean, the Reverend William E. FitzGerald, with Father Langguth as his assistant. Father Edmond Walsh, however, was still our Dean of Men, and the rules of appropriate apparel on the campus were still in effect — sometimes effected, shall we say, by Fr. Walsh's strong arm on a weak shoulder. We had, it must be admitted, a sense of the tradition we were called upon to perpetuate.

The Sophomore year was broken open by a welcome dance in Berchmans, with Charles Black, Harold Mullen, John Dieter, Fred Tartaro, Cass Burke, Conrad Sternchak, Joe Kehoe, and Fernando Frillici as committeemen. A Jack Ross and his band, with freshmen Mark Lolatte and John Bigley entertaining during the intermission, made things pleasant.

The Fulcrum died and replacing the mimeographed sheet was The Stag, our well-read local college newspiece. How we were growing! A new basketball coach, Bob Noonan, came along, a pep rally popped — with Bernie Beglane conducting — and another basketball season began.

Would wonders never cease? The Glee Club had a Christmas concert appearance with the Connecticut Symphony; Rev. Arthur McGratty, author and ex-Marine chaplain with a Brooklyn accent and stories to go with it ("I've got a million of 'em"), gave an inspiring retreat; and, as usual, the mid-winter carnival dance followed. This was the first of the famous Ice Carvings affairs that attracted wide publicity, and there was Al Lombardy's music to dance to.

Our Rector, Father James H. Dolan, went off to Boston at this time to be Vice-Provincial of New England, and Father FitzGerald took over rectorial duties along with his deanship position. It seemed like Jesuit propaganda when our next big news item featured Father John C. Ford as the guest speaker on the Knights of Xavier program. He thought that we should be better acquainted with problems about alcoholism, and those who were lucky enough to attend listened and all of us learned.

Toward the end of the year a number of affairs jumped up: the Radio Club went on the air with the Passion series called "The Living God"; a Glee Club concert and dance brought Fairfield together with Albertus Magnus College; and the college politicos went to Hartford for the CISL. Jack O'Connell chairmaned the Sophomore Prom, with the assistance of John Kush, Joe McEnany, Charles Black, John Broderick, Conrad Sternchak, Richard Landy, Bob Steele, Harold Mullen, and Paul McCarthy. This was at the Ritz Ballroom where Mal (Old Reliable) Hallett and his boys attended to the musical chores. There was no melody, however, that we could sing during the final examinations that a brief time before had loomed, especially during the three-hour Rhetoric stint that we struggled through.

Juniors? That we were when our Acting Rector, Fr. FitzGerald, opened the year with the traditional Mass of the Holy Ghost, followed by a Reception Day during which the college clubs dared to entice new members into their roster. The cafeteria was decorated festively, and a punch-doughnuts-coffee combination eased the conversation. A Junior-Senior Varsity Drag (whatever that means) was the occasion of a Hugh Golden orchestra appearance in Berchmans, while the Radio Club's "Fairfield University Interprets the News" — organized by Mr. Meaney — began its weekly series over WICC.

White lines had appeared in the parking lot in an effort to bring order out of chaos, and the town of Fairfield selectmen diplomatically suggested to us that they were not in favor of renaming North Benson Road by the more euphonious "Indianapolis Speedway."

Gala was the word for our Junior Logic Specimen with the faculty members starring as Kefauver questioners. There was a general feeling that the kind of people who never win a lottery ticket would thoroughly enjoy this performance which, by the way, ended when the memorable ten-tailed cat — formulated by one sadist — was syllogized. It was only this catastrophe that was objected to by admirers, like Fr. MacGillivray, of the Felidae who offered the cat's point of view: "This was the kind of speculative falderal on which humanity is forever wasting its time." Cats' viewpoints, however, were shunted when some refreshing soul reminded us that here, in toto, was but a rehearsal for the Junior Oral at the end of the year.

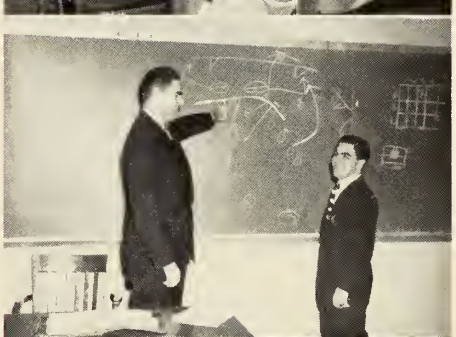
In October of that 1950 year Fr. Dolan came back to us as Rector while our Fr. FitzGerald went on to Boston as Provincial of the New England Jesuits. Big things happened and they loomed too. Graduation loomed when the jeweler came to fit us for our rings, designed by Connie Sternchak. And our Glee Club joined with St. Joseph's College for a performance, as well as with the Connecticut Symphony in their second Christmas program. There were more exams, a retreat with Father Richard Hegarty ("Play the man!" and "There are no bargains in this world"), and another mid-winter ice-carnival with Gene Williams' music. Fr. Lyons arrived, replacing Fr. Saunders in the Dean of Men's job, and a new stock of fancier neckties went on display in his office.

When we returned for the 1951 semester, we wondered why the Xavier halls were not as crowded as before, and then we heard that Mr. James P. ("You're out of uniform, boy!") Vail had gone tobogganning down his front steps and was convalescing with three fractured vertebrae at Bridgeport Hospital. Things definitely were not the same until the building swayed with the news that the Red Stags had beaten the "Cinderella Team" of Bridgeport in basketball and had won an invitation to the NAIB tourney in Medford. Signs the like of which had never been seen before appeared in the cafeteria (now Markovic Hall) and the team was nominated for honorary membership in the Hall of Fame. Coach Jim Hanrahan was the man of the hour, and the school closed in order that students might go to Medford — with the warning, however, that Boston's South Station was not to be brought back as a souvenir.

Junior Week was memorable, — thanks to committeemen Ed Kelley and Joe Cuomo for the Communion Breakfast talk by Knights of Columbus director William Mulligan; to Bernie Beglane for the Smoker and boxing show by the Bridgeport Police Athletic League and a talk by Burt Shurtleff, ex-wrestler and amiable card; to Jim Long, Connie Sternchak, Joe Wihbey, Will Kelly, Charlie Vernale, Tom LoRicco, Gerry Russo, John Fray, and Bob Conroy for the Junior Prom at Actor's Colony Inn in Derby.

For our Senior offices we placed Joe McEnany as President, Joe Cuomo Vice-President, Jim Doheny Secretary, and Bob Wak-



in Treasurer, but before they could act in their capacity as fourth-year men there were some little things called exams that they and we had to suffer. "Who's on your oral board?" was a popular question we had never asked before.

Retreat began our Senior year with Rev. George McCabe (with his "one-way ticket" and "phfffft"), followed by the solemn Mass celebrated by Father Dolan, and Freshman Day with its colorful booths and recruiting club officers. A Harvest Hop opened the social activities when Hugh Golden's boys played in the corn-husk-and- pumpkin atmosphere of well-patronized Berchmans. A group of Juniors joined our Seniors (Ed McPadden, Jim Aspinwall, Connie — the Voice — Sternchak, Bob Wakin, and Ralph Mastrangelo) to form the entertainment committee.

Only a few weeks had passed when our new Rector, Rev. Joseph D. FitzGerald, succeeded Father Dolan. A magazine drive, spurred on by music from the Dixieland Club, admonitions from The Stag, and much leg work by team captains and team members, resulted in a $1500 profit for our depleted class treasury. And then "An Evening at the Manor" affair, to raise money for the yearbook — a charitable enterprise — netted a few cents over ten dollars. But The Manor with its firm devotion to Saint Jude didn't mind. Court jester Joe Forte with a Brink's facial scared the ladies, while Frank Woods, Jack Walsh, and Bill Miller as serfs in burlap sacks "serfed" refreshments.

The Bridgeport Club dance was remembered for, among other things, its decorations; but whoever collected that much tinfoil should, we say, cut down on his smoking. The Metropolitan boys' card party attempted to replace the now verboten card games once kibitzed in the cafeteria. And lest we repeat ourselves, the Waterbury and New Haven and Valley Clubs did things too, and they are faithfully recorded in another section.

The mid-year's exams went by and we recuperated with the music of Ted Herbert, with committeemen Bill McGrath and company doing yeomanlike work. Mr. Simon Harak returned, after a serious illness, to guide the Glee Club that had been ably batoned by George Thomas in a difficult substitute role. Sports enthusiasts honored Joe Kehoe when he scored his thousandth point and the politicos went to Hartford again, with Jim Aspinwall, John Boyle, Marshall Bridgewater, Bill Buchtmann, Jim Dinnan, John Fray, and John Relihan making the trip. The Business Club made headlines (i.e. of The Stag) when its guest speaker Governor John Lodge made his appearance at a dinner.

The Manor finally appeared too — although the members of the staff had their worried moments; Father Leo O'Keefe had given the senior retreat before the Easter vacation; what were really final exams came and went. That is the fifty-two story as we see it. And now that we look back upon it all, it was one of the shortest stories ever told.

GLEE CLUB

Rev. John P. Murray, S.J.

"Please, please! Now watch me." And with these words, sotto voce, another concert begins. What the audiences see and hear is somewhat of a shadow of a Toscanini performance, we admit, but it is a complimentary shadow. For Mr. Harak has taken the members through their paces so sedulously that, though one might suspect a tired and perfunctory rendition, what frequently results is a freshness and a bright air.

Mr. Simon Harak

The medium of radio has offered an opportunity to bring music out of the school auditoriums and concert halls into televisionless homes throughout the area. And a further range was extended by last season's recordings that represented a gamut of programs ranging from Bach to Rodgers. The quality of the recordings and performance joined to make it a worthwhile addition to any music library.

Through the assistance of the Area Clubs on campus, the choristers have made themselves known to communities throughout the state. And aside from the cultural aspects that might be considered in these hamlets, they have proved financial successes as well. They have been seen and heard in Waterbury, New Haven, Ansonia, Hartford, Middletown, and in Bridgeport's Klein Memorial.

The high point of the season — in previous years at the Waldorf-Astoria ballroom — was at the College of New Rochelle, where Mr. Harak, assisted by Faculty Moderator Rev. John P. Murray, offered his best talents. The tireless work of the rehearsal hall becomes electric reality when the lads look up as they hear the familiar words, "Please, please! Now watch me." And the concert has begun.

PUBLIC AFFAIRS CLUB

Call it a club, but this organization goes in for more meaty fare than fraternization. Despite the informal tone of its weekly gatherings, under the direction of Rev. Gabriel Ryan, the intricate problems about labor, politics, family life, and foreign affairs are discussed with zest as well as a dash of relish.

Enlightening and informative were the talks of invited speakers like our own Father Sarjeant, former rector of Baghdad College, speaking on the Zionist movement in Palestine, as well as Rev. John Knott, the director of the Cana movement in the Hartford diocese, who was concerned with particular influences affecting the family of today.

Rev. Gabriel G. Ryan, S.J.

The family? This group worries about it. It has set up nothing less than a commission to study and report on the economics and sociology of the family, to make surveys, and it has gone to Boston to participate in a workshop on current family problems at the annual NFCCS convention.

Representing Fairfield at the spring convention of the New England Catholic Student Peace Federation at the College of Our Lady of the Elms was the president John Relihan who was also the secretary of the Peace Federation for the current year.

The mock sessions of the Connecticut Intercollegiate Student Legislature, however, are the climax of the year's activities. This year the Fairfield men, conscious of the reputation made by previous groups, made their presence felt by the introduction of three bills on labor. This year's undergraduates were not unaware of their being tomorrow's legislators.

The Manor

The "same old story" about the publishing of a yearbook? You won't get it here. Of course there were the usual long hours, editors' meetings, schedules for photographs, soliciting for advertising, trips here and trips there, and of course the grasping for a thought, a line, or even the nebulous word.

THE MANOR won't please all its readers, but our efforts were directed toward that goal. Nor is it expected that this year's book will be awarded any Pulitzer Prize. On the other hand we don't expect any special award from Harvard's Lampoon.

THE MANOR is not to be considered a mirror in which the individual will see a perfect reflection of his own little life. Rather we hope that THE MANOR can be looked upon as a true and accurate account in words and pictures of general student life as it was known and lived by the members of Fairfield University's Class of 1952.

We do hope that in some picture, some story, or in a name, every member of the Class of 1952 will find something that will allow him to say, "This is our story, this is my story."

SODALITY OF OUR LADY

Every Jesuit college, no matter where it is, has a sodality, and the more active the sodality is, the more Jesuit is the college. "Sodality," to many people, may be a malapropism for "solidity," and they would not be very wrong. For such readers it might be necessary to repeat what every Catholic college student knows, that the sodality exists to honor Our Lord through Mary, His Mother, especially in aiding its members to carry over into diurnal living the principles learned in the academic curricula.

Its work? Well, from the beginning, the sodality has sponsored daily recitation of the rosary during May and October, with the weekly recitation on every Monday morning under the auspices of Our Lady's Section. The Catholic Truth Section distributes reading matter, while the Mission Section collects coins weekly for the benefit of Jesuit missionaries in Jamaica and Baghdad.

Last year a series of Cana Conferences was arranged in conjunction with Albertus Magnus College, a Friday "Vigil for Peace" took place in the chapel of Berchmans Hall, and, as a complement to the vigil, a May Day Field Mass — with the students of the preparatory school participating — was celebrated by Father Rector for the intention of peace through the conversion of Russia. It was intended that this become an annual custom at Fairfield until Mary's promise at Fatima may be realized.

This year, under the continued guidance of Rev. Edmund Hogan, the sodality's prefect — Dominic Autuori — has extended the work of the group to include religious instruction of the young people in the area. In accord with this work as well as with other efforts of the sodalists' activities, various representatives have attended conventions in Hartford and other New England cities where the problems pertinent to apostolic efforts have been discussed under the National Federation of Catholic College Students.

Assisting Mr. Autuori were Assistant Prefect Philip Backus, Secretary Charles McCullough, and Treasurer Edward McPadden.

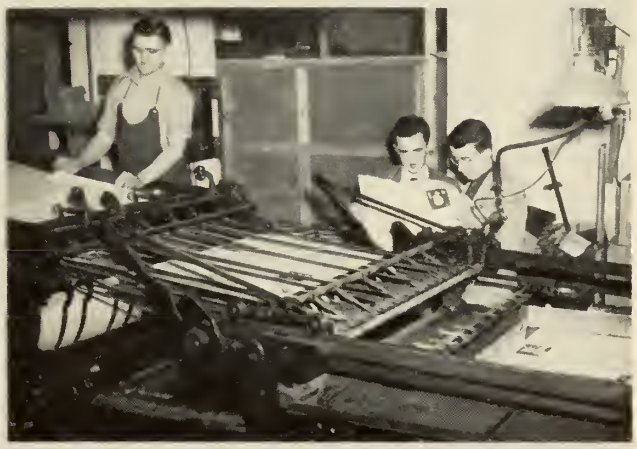
The Stag

If you don't know what THE STAG is, then you may consider yourself a charter member of the newest student activity, The Hermite Club. You are absent bi-weekly? Now that is unfortunate, because that is also the publishing schedule for THE STAG.

Under the Red Stag's antlers we find news, features, sports photos, cartoons, and ads bringing us the Fairfield story. When the first student publication was distributed about five years ago, it was Father Langguth's wish at that time, "that it may quickly and vigorously grow to full newspaper maturity." That THE STAG is on its way, under the direction of Father Joseph Scannell, we all know.

To some of the members of the Class of 1952 we can attribute part of the responsibility for this growth of THE STAG. Among those in this year's group deserving of such commendation are "Chuck" Black, Frank Woods, Connie Sternchak, Bob Steele, Dick McCormick, Fred Tartaro, Bernie Beglane, Jim Musante, Frank Philbin, Dom Lonardo, Joe Iacuone, Bob Drongoski, Ed Sperry and Ray Yuskauskas.

Did the Greeks have a word for newspapers? They had a few words. They said, "To give me information is thy office." THE STAG fills this office and does so in an exemplary manner.



BELLARMINE DEBATING SOCIETY

Continuing the long and laudable tradition of oratory fostered in Jesuit schools, the Bellarmine Debating Society continued not only to improve their own speaking ability and to develop their poise on a platform but to win several debates as well. They had to. With previous years' victories over Providence, Bridgeport, Iona, and Holy Cross, the Bellarminers had a reputation to defend and uphold.

That they did, with early season decisions over Iona, Hofstra, and St. Peter's College in Jersey City. The climax of each debating season is the annual prize debate to determine Fairfield's best debater and outstanding team. Directed by Rev. John L. Clancy, this Senior-Junior society has for its officers President John Fray, '52, Joseph Franchi, '53, as Vice President, and Thomas Désy, '52, as Secretary-Treasurer.

Sociabilities

Social tradition in many universities centers about the sort of mellow activities that bring joyous lumps — no cream, please — into the throats of old grads given to musing, and, incidentally, the throats of the undergraduates were not unamused. Though we may have lacked any neatly packaged social schedule that swelled our extracurricular life to any sizeable bulk, still it was never routine.

Memories of our first dance in '48's November return. The "Pioneers" of '47-'51 (What's in a name?) opened the doors of Berchmans Hall to our wondering class, and then we were soon dancing quietly among them, storing up in our minds their example of college social demeanor for future reference. It was evident that night that we hadn't acquired the familiarity with our classmates that they displayed among their group, so it wasn't unusual for us to gaze greenly at their relaxed intimacy.

Somehow we had a way of learning. In Sophomore year, when we entertained the incoming Frosh with a Welcome Dance, we harvested many of the available corn-stalks and pumpkins on the Fairfield hills, bought too much cider, and warmly felt that we had shown the lads a well-planned welcome. This was our introduction to the oft-recurring and clumsy phrase, "Successful socially but woeful financially," but we cavalierly dismissed it as an enjoyable way to incur a class deficit.

Mixed metaphor fans will smile when we say that though these Fall dances launched Fairfield socially, it was the Mid-Winter Carnival that propelled us past the doldrums of January examinations. (It's the navy and the air force that's on our minds!) Even the perpetual bachelors in the class found energy to take money out of their pockets for this tux-affair. No orchestra sounded so inviting nor table talk so comfortable. Although each felt that his date was unpardonably overlooked in the selection, there was indeed something to be said for the young lady chosen for the one-year reign as Queen of the Fairfield Mid-Winter Carnival Those evenings, somehow, we danced away too quickly, with the reflective ice stags that watched us leave becoming sentinels to some of the happiest times we've had in college.

The Spring Proms at Glorieta Manor and the Actor's Colony Inn provided the velvet touch for second semester. They had an air of spontaneous "comenjoyment" that their small quarters could not stifle. Why did we always seem to select the off-the-highway places for these affairs? And why was there always some wanderer of the night who could be counted on to arrive five minutes before the dance was over, with "Well, you see, it was like this"?

Nor was dancing our only fun. There were card parties in Xavier Hall when the toothpaste prizes seemed to be as judiciously appropriate as a case of Listerine. Then, during the yearly Smoker, there were boxing bouts, skits that have a habit of revolving — this time around something called "Operatio sequitur esse" — and the ineffectual efforts of three of the class's strongmen to floor the visiting wrestler. The Bensonians were always on hand with their popular barbershop harmonies — a unique quartet that blamed their limited repertoire on their unabashed desire to study!

"The Barber of Palermo" and "Two Italian-American Barbers in Paris" highlighted our operatic season during Junior and Senior years, when the seductive wiles of the male Maria and the composer's unexpected shower of bananas into the audience could be considered only as inspired showmanship. Nor will the "Pasta Fazoola" rendering by all the cast be soon forgotten. On Pioneer Night — that name again! — during Junior year we roared at "a shave and a haircut and a bit of Aquinas, $1.25" and the antics of the "Ratio Studiorum Society." The city of Boston received its accustomed accolades, the faculty never winced too painfully at our broad satire, and the waiters served roast beef sandwiches that seemed an eternity in the making.

Those nights when we toasted a classmate's bride, the philosophical sessions in some boarder's room, and the excursions following the basketball team — all stand like punctuation marks in the story of our four years at Fairfield. It is one that arose out of our own spontaneity, one that will be retold, but never entirely recaptured, whenever we meet again.

What? Reef Road flooded again? There's a hurricane heading our way from Havana. All hands together, fellows, we will help anyone that needs help!

This is the sort of spirit that formed the college chapter of the ARC, an arc built by Christian charity and American generosity. Severe storms, industrial accidents, enemy attack in the event of war — these are the freaks of nature and of man that concern the local disaster unit.

With Mr. James Vail as faculty director, the college group of the Red Cross has been active in clenching their fists and letting the white-gowned nurses puncture their arms for the valuable blood that can be rechanneled into the veins of wounded men in Korea and American hospitals.

Peter LaChance as President, George Poillon as Vice President, Richard Bepko as Secretary, Eugene O'Meara as Treasurer, and Emanuel Macchia as Public Relations Director are the officers.

RADIO CLUB

The good-memory boys may recall how the men behind the mike began in their freshman year a venture affectionately called "the private-eye period," with its two radio presentations of such guaranteed hair-raisers as "The Case of the China Cat" and "The Thirty-Minute Alibi." But the guarantee has now elapsed, and Richard Diamond is no longer jealous.

Putting aside the eerie sound effects, the mikemen looked seriously thoughtful as they participated in an entirely different sort of program, "Fairfield University Interprets the News," and for many Monday evenings from 8-8:15 they listened to Mr. John Meaney, their director, introduce the faculty speaker of the evening. They took turns, as it were, in commenting on and asking questions about what they thought the people should know.

This year the news interpretation feature continued to serve the public with its up-to-the-minute commentary on current problems on Sunday evening from 7:30-7:45. What was discussed? Moral myopia in college education, labor and management as partners in production, foreign policy for America, God and man in universities, Literature and Science, Church and State and the appointment of an ambassador to the Vatican, alcoholism, and universal military training — these were some of the topics.

Nor were the radioers idle in their meetings when they considered techniques of sports broadcasting, ad lib carryings-on, abilities for directing, staff announcers' qualifications, remote radio broadcasts, and radio reading. No one knows what lozenges they prefer.

AMATEUR RADIO SOCIETY

"CQ, CQ, CQ, This is W1THX, Fairfield University in Connecticut, U.S.A." These words go out over the ether to all points of the world as members of the Fairfield University Amateur Radio Society operate their "ham" station on the campus.

Organized in December of 1950 through the impetus of Nicholas Rosa, '52, and its first moderator, Mr. John A. Dillon of the Physics department, the society strives to train operators for its 75-watt transmitter and foster an interest in the echnology of radio. Lectures and experiments in electronics aid in imparting a knowledge of the mysteries of the vacuum tube on the "radio bugs" in the school.

During the 1951-52 season, under the guidance of its new moderator, Rev. William Guindon, a new 150-watt transmitter was set up high in the tower of McAuliffe Hall and many members received operators' licenses. Not content with mere radio construction and operation, these enthusiasts also conducted joint experiments with the biology department involving the effects of microwaves on growing tissue. Thus in varied ways the Amateur Radio Society has cultivated an interest in radio and electronics.

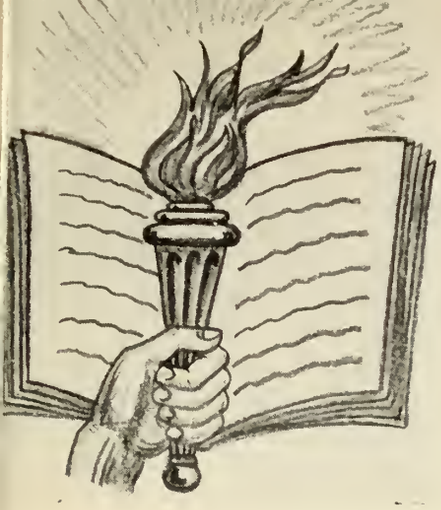
DIXIELAND CLUB

While some Fairfielders discuss methods for the defense of the German Rhineland, and others debate about the cost of betel nuts in Thailand, still others listen to the music of, you guessed it, Dixieland.

A liking for that music which can be truly called America's own brought this group together. Meetings, or more precisely, sessions, are held in a basement room in Xavier Hall. The club is called upon to provide the "jump off" for many school functions. Ticket sales for dances, sports events, and other activities get "dixieland music" for their launchings and promotion schemes.

Although the bell for first period means that Physics formulae and the chemist's atomic weights and valences will soon fill the air, it is quite difficult to get Wang Wang Blues, That Da Da Strain, and Snag It, out of that area of Xavier.



EDUCATION CLUB

CEA, superintendents, PTA, pay scales, NEA, and in-service training. What are these? Are they left-overs from the New Deal alphabet or are they clarifying statements from a government bulletin, issued to clarify another bulletin that had to be clarified? Actually these abbreviations and phrases are very meaningful to a certain group of Fairfielders, for they will be a part of the professional life of those students who have chosen a career in teaching.

The Education Club of Fairfield University was organized "to promote the professional, cultural, and social interests of its members." A varied program has been carried on by these potential targets of the timeworn "no more pencils, no more books" rhyme. The club has had field trips, guest speakers on campus, and a dinner to climax this year's program. Visitors to Danbury State Teachers College and to Teachers College of Connecticut heard panel discussions on "The Connecticut Education Association and the Future Teacher" and "What a Superintendent Looks For In a Prospective Teacher." Miss Dorthea M. Lennon and Mr. Robbins Barstow of the Connecticut Education Association spoke on "The Teacher's Professional Organizations" when they visited the campus. The year's activities were concluded with a dinner at the Hitching Post Inn where the club honored Dr. Henry Herge, a member of the Connecticut State Department of Education and also a member of the faculty of the University Graduate School.

The first officers elected by the club were President, Edwin Sperry; Vice President, James Dinnan; Corresponding Secretary, Brendon Mermann; Recording Secretary, Richard McCormick; and Treasurer, Edward Kelley.

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

Behind the props of basketball, baseball, track, cross country, golf, and intramural sports stand the members of the Athletic Association, ready to do their bit, like their illustrious A.A. brothers, in guiding and forcing gently their confreres to what is known as capital V. Organized formally in 1949, the group has expanded steadily each year, both in members and in the calibre of services rendered.

Throughout the year, the A.A. has stimulated student support by means of pep rallies, sport nights, and dances. But, more modestly, the brunt of their work concerns the minor details of hosting visiting teams, judging, timing, and recording events, sponsoring and officiating at intramural sports, conducting an annual ping-pong tournament, and selling tickets and supervising attendance for the home basketball games.

The prop men behind the prop men were President Bernard Beglane, Vice President Robert Walsh, Secretary John O'Connor, Treasurer John Welch, with Rev. Thomas F. Lyons as faculty moderator.

BUSINESS CLUB

One of the more specialized groups of the college, the Business Club, is to the future accountants, salesmen and executives what the Mendel Club is to future biologists and doctors. It allows many students of similar practical interests the opportunity to meet and discuss, somewhat informally, topics of interest to all. And more, it aims to bring together the theoretical business matters taught in the green-boarded classrooms and the practical problems of the prosaic office — as well as to help the members to become better acquainted with the employment programs in their specialized work.

School publications were increased by one when "THE ADVISOR," an editorial bulletin published by the Business Club, made its appearance on the cafeteria newsstand this year. The "Hearst-while" journalists of the club are directed by Ronald Hunts and James Hannan, the Co-Editors, and Daniel Mullins, the Assistant Editor. The ADVISOR is "designed for the information and interest of men engaged in the study of business and the practice of it in the world of commerce."

Meetings at the college and dinner affairs in Bridgeport comprise the club's functions. The program this year included dinner-talks by Mr. Gilbert L. King, member of the New York Stock Exchange; Mr. Herman Steinkraus, President of the Bridgeport Brass Company and Past President of the Chamber of Commerce; James V. Joy, President of the West End Bank of Bridgeport; Manuel Rodriguez, Purchasing Agent of Remington Rand, Incorporated; Paul Boynton, Director of Industrial Relations of Socony-Vacuum Company of New Jersey; and John Davis Lodge, Governor of the State of Connecticut.

Under the direction of Mr. Thomas Fitzpatrick and Mr. James Liebke, faculty moderators, this year's officers are Chairman John Mester, Vice-President Daniel Mullins, Treasurer Ronald Hunts, Recording Secretary Vincent Vogel, Corresponding Secretary John Broderick, and Publicity Director Robert McLean.

STUDENT COUNCIL

It was Burke who said, "Good order is the foundation of all good things." Here at Fairfield the body politic that gives order to our good things is the Student Council. The Council (with thanks to one A. Lincoln) gives government of the students, and for the students.

By coordinating the various student activities and by acting as the liaison between the student body and the University administration the Council supplies government of the students. A Fairfield basketball game, a Glee Club concert, a MANOR dance, and a Metropolitan Club hay ride would offer an entertaining evening, but to have them all taking place on the same evening would present a difficulty. The alert philosopher will see the difficulty immediately. To cope with such a crowded evening the Council introduced a Social Calendar that serves as a clearing house for activities planned by student organizations.

This year also saw the Council act on a request from the student body to the administration. If the Christmas vacation could be started earlier than it had been planned, then the pay envelopes for holiday work would be fuller. Our solons prepared the request, submitted it to the University officers, and then presented their decision to the student body. The decision was a negative one, with academic wisdom winning over economic hopefulness.

During the past year in giving us government for the students the Council acted on a number of important measures. Fairfield became a member of the National Federation of Catholic College Students when the Council voted to accept the invitation extended to us to join that group. In addition, the Council continued to assist some student activities in meeting their financial obligations. With most of the student organizations not having funds of their own for their projects, the Council subsidizes club programs. This practice by the Council brought about a financial crisis for the Council itself. This was met by an assessment which was placed on the entire student body to refill the Council's coffers. Social legislation? Socially the Council, as it does each year, sponsored the Mid-Winter Carnival.

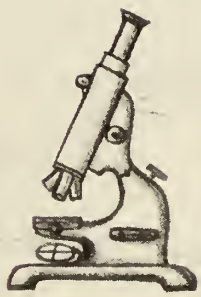
The motion that ended this year's activity by the Student Council concluded a full and successful year for the Red Stag's wardens. This was made possible by the efforts of each member of the Council, the resulting legislation, and the very capable assistance and direction of the Council's moderator, Father Robert MacDonnell.

MENDEL CLUB

Dissatisfied with the drudgery of examining the research work of others, this group has put on its bifocals and got down to the more interesting work of its own — researeh projects in Physiology, Genetics, and Cytology.

Organized three years ago by Rev. Francis Wilkie, its present moderator, the Mendel Club has continued the work of its past presidents, Ciro Veneruso and Frank Bepko; and Robert DelVecchio, this year's leader, has arranged lectures by the students on such topics as congestive heart failure and cerebral palsy. Demonstrations, discussions, films have all dealt with problems of heredity as well as medical ethics.

Guest lectures enhaneed the club's program — Dr. Miolene on diabetics, and Dr. Pageant on neurologieal surgery. Let the Mayo Clinic look to its laurels!



LANGUAGE CLUBS

So you think that the drivers in your town have a monopoly on fender crushing? They even surpass New York's taxi drivers? Well, friend, evidently you know nothing about the drivers in Paris. Then again, you may think that the Dodgers have loyal and determined fans, and you may be right when you consider the "Dodger Sym-phony." But you should know something about the German ski enthusiast if you want to meet someone devoted to a sport. If you claim that the wearers of the green outdo everyone with their March 17th spectacle, then you know nothing of Italy's celebration of feast days like St. Joseph's or St. Rocco's.

The Language Clubs presuppose that their members have mastered the fundamentals of the language in which they are interested, and so they are concerned with the people and the customs of the country whose tongue interests them. The drivers of Paris, German skiers, and Italy's colorful observance of feast days all tell something, convey a meaning to the language club members.

Members who have lived in Germany, France, and Italy — whether as natives in their youth or as tourists (in their old age?) — have spoken to these clubs. John Grabon, a native German, and Philip Bourdeau, a native of France, had their impressions to give, while Art Sapienza and Jim Farnham spoke to the Italian and French clubs about their experiences as Holy Year tourists.

The Italian Club observes Saint Joseph's feast day each year with a Mass offered for world peace, and has shown movies of the observance of that day in Italy. Thomas Vitelli is President, John Vitale Vice President, and George Thomas is both Treasurer and Secretary.

"Der Hirsch" is the newspaper published by (you guessed it) the German Club, with Lawrence Schaefer and Emanuel Ondeck as co-editors and John Grabon and James Langanke as proof readers and rewrite men. Ondeck is also President of the club, while the other officers are Jerome Mayer as Vice President, Lawrence Schaefer Secretary, and John Howard Treasurer.

Berlitz has some competition in the French Club which uses records to acquire the precise pronunciation for conversational purposes. Films on French architecture have been shown, and, shall we add, both the French and German clubs conduct a letter-writing project with foreign students. Joseph Borderi presides as ranking officer of the French group, while Anthony Pagliaro is Vice President, John Halloran SecretaryTreasurer, and Jasper Jaser Publicity Chairman.

By virtue of these activities the Language Clubs could, and would, double their membership. You recall, of course, Charles V of Spain, connoisseur of men as soldiers, who said, "You are worth as many men as you know languages." Need we say more?

AREA CLUBS

WATERBURY CLUB

New Harbrivalburitan? You haven't heard of it? Well, you may not have seen it in one place at one time, but the parts that go to make it up are found right here in the student body. New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport, "Valley," Waterbury, and "Metropolitan" New York — there they are, all in a piece.

What does it do? They are social clubs, primarily, of course, but several of them like to spend whatever money they make by setting up scholarship funds for the college. Rev. John Dennis Crowley acts as overseer for the groups and works inwards as well. That he has much to be concerned with is undeniable. Take New Haven, for example.

VALLEY CLUB

There the Elm Street lads carried on a program of charitable and social activities, with Thomas Vitelli heading the club's Christmas party for the aged people at St. Andrew's Home, and with another Tom (LoRicco) chairmaning the New Year's dance at The Castle where Morris Watstein made a return appearance after the Junior Prom affair. John Howard made plans for the Glee Club concert benefiting the scholarship fund, while in general President George Thomas, Vice President Joseph Cuomo, Secretary John Boyle, Treasurer John McDougall, and Executive Directors Daniel Dinan and Robert McCoy were in charge.

And so it goes with the others. Hartford had its third annual concert for a scholarship fund at the Bushnell Memorial, a Christmas dance, a Spring dance, bowling party, and barbecue outing. Gennaro Russo as President, Lawrence Fagan as Treasurer, and Frederick Roback as Secretary combined to do the work of the organization.

The Valley Club too had its Communion Breakfast, a Thanksgiving social, its third annual Glee Club concert in Ansonia, a spring social, and two interested parish priests — Rev. Gerald Corrigan and Rev. James Noonan of the Ansonian Assumption parish — as outlying overseers. Joseph Iacuone, William Clifford, Francis Buismato, and Alfred Kingston formed the line reading from left to right — President, Vice President, Treasurer, and Secretary.

NEW HAVEN CLUB

Waterbury, first of the area clubs, also had its third annual Glee Club concert, with Harry Bergin as chairman. The annual Christmas dance, the dinner honoring this year's graduates, and the clambake were also enjoyed by the Brass City boys. Reversing the role of Mother and Dad in the give-and-take of college life, the club gave a dinner for their parents in May, and some of the faculty were guests as well. This year's slate of officers was: President, Francis Woods; Treasurer, Donald Brown; Recording Secretary, John Mahaney; and Corresponding Secretary, Joseph Carlin.

The Bridgeport group went formal when it ratified its constitution this year, with Mr. Perreault as the faculty consultor.

and — as officers — Fred Tartaro, President; Bronislaw Orlowski, Vice President; William J. Eugene McGrath, Corresponding Secretary; Maurice Fenton, Recording Secretary; and Gerard Mohyde, Treasurer. They had a Communion Breakfast in March, a dance in April, organized a basketball league at the Middle Street Boys' Club (with all games "replayed" at Sullivan's), went swimming at the Orcutt Boys' Club, showed films supplied by the Arctic Sports Shop, and masterfully helped out with the program for the Glee Club concert at the Klein Memorial.

A hick trick was found to click when the Metropolitan Club went on a hay ride. Some of the Metro boys, never lost for a quip, called the ride "the Long Island R.R. without tracks." What cards! On the more practical side, the club's scholarship fund was aided by a card party. Brendon Mermann as President, Robert Herlihy Vice President, James Lutz, Recording Secretary, Joseph McNally Corresponding Secretary, and Richard Mullowney, Treasurer.

And so it goes with the area clubs and their functions. They had their good times and wished you were there. There were songs of fellowship and afterwards the words of goodnight coming through the darkness as fingers fumbled for car locks and ignition switches. And wherever they were, they belonged to Fairfield and Fairfield was part of them.

THE BIRD WATCHERS

While others troop off to the smoke-filled rathskellers, noisy gymnasiums and the like, this robust group of avid ornithologists can be found happily thrashing about the flora and fauna of southern New England, in their energetic scouting for new species of our songster friends, the birds. Theirs is truly a carefree but rewarding pastime.

Our local Audubons are a fairly new group here at Fairfield. Early in the year, a handful of students, who long had been fascinated by the habits of the Winged, decided to organize. The movement was a tremendous success and soon their ranks swelled to an impressive number. The warmth with which this new activity was greeted was another indication of that strong desire to develop the whole man

With a thirst for their work, the society undertook a series of field trips. Most of these excursions had their terminus ad quem at the local sanctuary — Flanagan's Grove, a favorite meeting place for brilliantly hued birds of all sorts. Some of the creatures reported there are most curious indeed, several of them never having been catalogued. The Bird-Watchers have extended their operations on occasion over a wide area. In January, for example, a sizeable portion of the group journeyed to Uncle Charley's Health Farm in Waterbury, the mecca for bird lovers of lower New England.

Early dawn — Aurora kissing wings and bill — offers greater opportunities for bird watching, and if one should happen by Flanagan's Grove in the wee hours, the chances are one might spy this glowng group with their field glasses raised — eloquent testimony of Faithfulness to their motto, "We're all for the birds."

BASKETBALL

The closing game of the season against the University of Bridgeport may not be styled what is popularly known as a stunning upset, but it will have to suffice until something better comes along as a contest that Fairfielders enjoyed. It came somewhat as a climax to a summary recording of ten games won against nine games lost.

Lest that last word ring rather forlornly in the memory, it might be said that there were several thrills, naturally enough, that marked the 19-game schedule that opened at Brooklyn late in November with the Polytechnic Institute of that redoubtable city. This 95-81 victory was the beginning of the bashed records of the year, with Bob Markovic's 31 points and 11 foul goals, Joe Kehoe's 13 field goals the entire team's high mark of 95 points along with its 23 foul shots. It augured well.

Then the home season opened with an 83-61 score over Willimantic State Teachers, with Jimmie Homa as top scoring man with 17 points and Stan Suchenski with 16. Rider College, more accurate at the free-throw line, followed next with our first loss, 53-47. But after this setback came one of the more satisfying scores of the season, a 48-45 overtime decision over more highly esteemed St. Peter's College. Lacking eight points with three minutes remaining, the Fairfield team, enspirited by Bob Gerwien and Paul Frauenhofer, went on to steal away the ball to tie the score, and Suchenski along with Markovic established the margin of superiority.

Could we lose a game once in a while? Rider College had already answered that question, and a triad of other colleges joined them: St. Francis (Loretto, Pa.), 74-52; Bridgeport, 85-66; and Iona, 62-52. Clearly we were not yet ready for public acclaim in any NCAA meet nor any National Invitation Tourney.

There was a slight improvement, however, in the next two contests when Fairfield bettered New Haven State Teachers in a 61-54 game — Fred Lane starring — and Arnold, 89-66, with Gerwien as top scorer with 28.

Extra-Connecticut colleges did not regard us highly. There was Providence who, in the last few minutes, decided that they would win, 64-58; Boston College, unsafe until the final ten minutes — what disaster! — smiled weakly, 75-55; and spunky St. Anselm's took a 79-77 triple overtime to impress us that we could make mistakes.

Here, the Greeks would have it, was the peripeteia. Something must be done. Would we act? A little louder, please. Was that a "yes"? And "yes" it was, for with seven games remaining we won — no, this is no Merriwell team — a good five. And somehow, the Red Stags didn't feel outclassed.

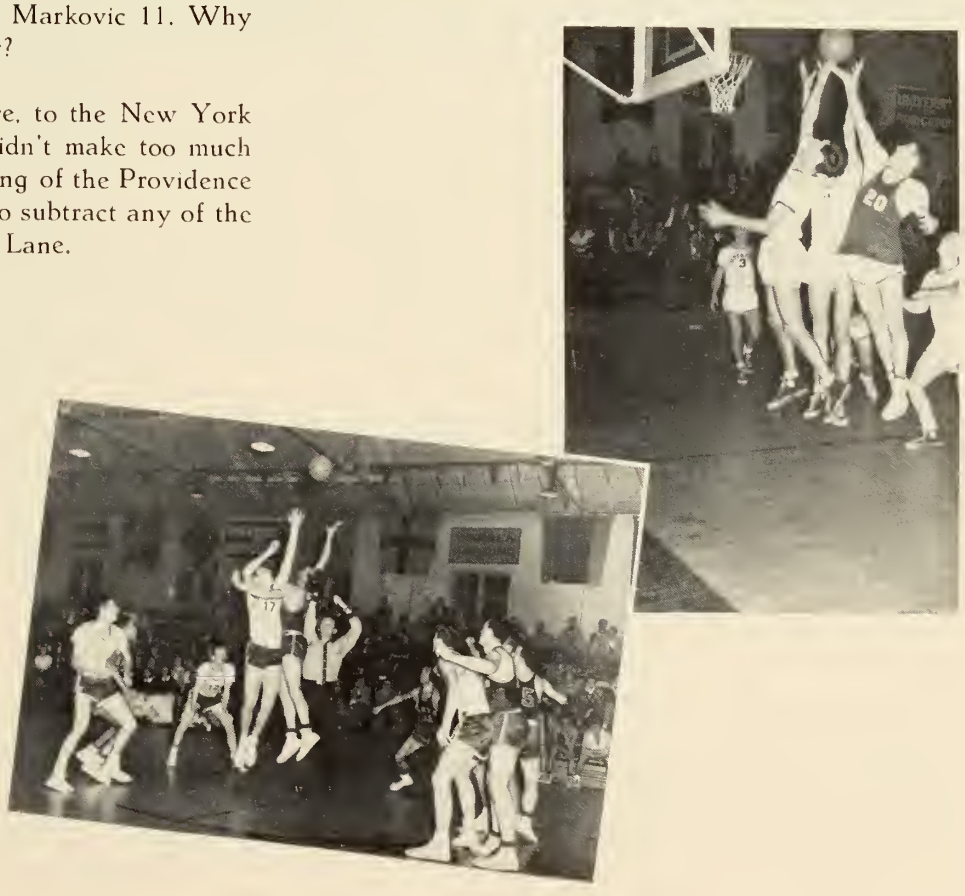
For instance, there was the New Britain State Teachers game that we liked, 51-49; the St. Francis (Brooklyn) game that we didn't like, 66-49; and a trio of colleges we vastly admired. But just for a few seconds, we want to recall that St. Francis game when Kehoe scored his 1000th point in his four years — the first Fairfield basketballer to do this — and for his achievement he gained a trophy and the basketball that did it.

Our three victories — if you are following us — included two old favorites, New Haven Teachers with a 65-51 score, and Arnold, by 104-69. And here the records were definitely bashed when we had 24 foul shots along with 40 field goals. After that game we wanted to play La Salle. But Coach Jim Hanrahan — our Jim — said no, not right now.

Then the team wondered whether they were right when, for the first time in eight games, they won over Providence. If you are really interested in the score, then call the A.A. — they'll know. We didn't care. All we remember is that Jackie O'Connell had 18, Gerwien 17, Lane 12, and Markovic 11. Why did this game have to be away?

There was another loss, sure, to the New York Athletic Club, but the score didn't make too much difference. We were still thinking of the Providence game, though we didn't want to subtract any of the plucky glory from Kehoe and Lane.

Are you ready for a breather? Then, you have expected that we will conclude with all the jargon, clichés, and accumulated corn that all sports writers pop with the traditional final game of the season, with the Yales and the Harvards, the Blue and the Grays and such. It was the second encounter of the season with the ARCHrivals, Bridgeport, envisioned just as the sportscasters would have it:



"The great season came to a most pleasant finale with the indubitable triumph over the Purple Knights, 88-79. In addition to leveling the season's skirmishes to a game apiece, the win also gave Fairfield her first place tie with the wearers of the iron mask for the Bridgeport Little Three Conference.

"Gerwien proved to be a veritable thorn in the side of Bridgeport as he counted not only for 27 tallies but also paced the club off both bards. Next in line for individual honors was Kehoe, playing the final game of his collegiate career. He found the range for 15 points, one more than Suchenski. Lane chipped in for 13.

"The Red Stags' shooting was the decisive factor in the win as they collected 34 two-pointers in 74 attempts, while UB hit for only 29 in 71 tries. A rough battle, the game saw Fairfield click from the foul line 20 times in 32 chances, while the Knights managed to collect one more than the Stags in two less tries.

Fairfield led throughout the tilt except for a few minutes in the second quarter, but adept floor guidance on the part of Captain Kehoe rallied the team for the decision.

"In ending a tough campaign with a respectable record, high individual scoring honors went to Gerwien with 254 points. Suchenski was next with 242, and Kehoe followed with 206. Rounding out the century-mark scorers were Lane with 171, Markovic with 127, and O'Connell with 104. Markovic, playing in only 11 games, was out of action through a good part of the season because of a knee injury. Honors were afforded to individual members of the team: Suchenski was named to the area's first team, while Kehoe, Gerwien, and Lane were named to the second squad. Thus Fairfield ended its season with all indications pointing to a strong team for the next two years.

"This season's experience," so say the sportsmen, "will pay off for the frosh-soph returnees."

Well, we are no readers of tea-leaves nor Roman soothsayers, but we will say undoubtedly that this was a good team captained by Joe Kehoe, under a capable coach Jim Hanrahan, an enthusiastic moderator of athletics Fr. Lyons, and the ever-willing-to-be-of-help Fr. Kinsella. The future, we must always be reminded, will inevitably come.

TRACK

What did that politician say? "Let's take a look at the record?" We will just that to brief ourselves on Fairfield's harried harriers. The won-and-lost count may not be impressive, but Coach Perrault found that his lads, like Housman's, played heart and soul.

"Steady" Eddie Dowling contributed a new school record in the 440-yard run in the New Haven meet. Ed's time was 53:7 seconds. Then Jasper Jaser set another new school record with a discus toss of 10 feet 4 inches. Along with these were George Boser, Jim Bacik, and Danny D'Elia's contributions which could be counted on whether the track and field men were in the won or in the lost column.

Ed Tamasunas, the new track coach, guided the squad through the following schedule this year.

Results of the 1951 Season

Coach Joe Yabrowsky

BASEBALL

Coach Joe Yabrowsky, for the second year of varsity baseball at Fairfield, was willing to better the first season's total of seven successes against five losses. What gave him encouragement was the previous help of pitchers Norb Fahey and Jack Doheny along with their very capable receiver, Jim Roach.

In fact, his smile grew broader when he saw the familiar faces of Walt McVety, Bill Smith, Elliott Pierson, and Jim Doheny in the infield, as well as two of the pasture boys, Rudy Girandola and Dick Landy, returning with the others. Newcomer Jack Murren, a good stick man, completed the outfield.

Reserve strength was made strong by the addition of Max O'Meara, Harry Marmion, Ben Ciola, Sonnie Scrimenti, and big Jack Kulowiec. Also available were reservists Owen Flynn, Skip Vegliante, and John McLean. With this combination, the Stags look to a favorable season.

INTRAMURALS

Anyone who went in our out for intramural sports had fun, whether the sport was touch football, class bowling, or just plain ping-pong. During the "football" season, eight teams competed for top honors with the lowbrow Filosophers eventually yelling, "We did it." Bill Rice, player-coach, with Jack Doheny, Larry Fagan, Norb Fahey, Jim Grasso, and John Bigley ran and tossed with distinction. Those who were there remember the accurate passing of Doheny that enabled his team to score a 12-6 victory over the Schafters, winners of last year's league.

Bowling was conducted on a class basis, with a 6-team league with Bill George directing a fifteen-week schedule. A non-Bostonian team called the Red Sox — with Dave Fortuna, Joe Milewski, Bernie Beglane, and Bill George — finished two games ahead of another team called the Dodgers, with a final record of 32 victories and 13 losses. Individual honors went to Jim Long and Bill Bennett with a 103 mark, while Tom Molanphy had a high individual game total of 143. And to make this complete, Bill Bennett, with a 369 total, came out best in the individual series.

Ping-pong? It was Bob Steele again, winning his second title in four years. But he had to do it the hard way against a field of over fifty players and the finalist Charlie McGould, a freshman, in the best of seven games.

Rev. Joseph Manning, the intramural moderator, had as much fun as the lads. It was all in the game.

Acknowledgements

That the 1952 MANOR is a reality can be attributed to the many individuals who have given so lavishly of their time and talents. Space does not permit an adequate listing of their names nor of their fine contributions. But let it be said here that their accomplishments did not go unnoticed. They have the thanks of the entire student body.

The editor does feel that among the contributors to this endeavor certain individuals do deserve special consideration and therefore special thanks. They have done everything in their power to make the work of the editor easier and to produce a better book. Among the students, those deserving of a special bouquet for their unselfish efforts are Ed Kelley, Ray Yuskauskas, John Walsh, Connie Sternchak, and Ed Sperry.

On behalf of the entire staff I take this opportunity of expressing our gratitude to Fred Reynolds of the Rundbaken Engraving Company for his many long hours of consultation and direction in our behalf; to Frederick Frankes of The John J. Corbett Press for his general helpfulness and patience; to Frank O'Neill of the Chidnoff Studios for his personal attention to the smallest detail; to Walter Rugg of Fairfield for his wonderful sketches and helpful suggestions; and finally to Father MacGillivray for being such an understanding Moderator.

—FRANCIS WOODS,

Editor-in-Chief.

Read's

Congratulates
The Class of '52

IT MEANS A LOT TO BE A COLLEGE MAN

Your college degree is the cornerstone of your chosen career. It symbolizes the sum total of advanced learning and discipline plus your own hard work and ability.

IT MEANS A LOT TO BE A WELL DRESSED MAN

Clothes don't make the man but first impressions are important. In READ'S Men's Shop and Men's Furnishings Department, you will find correctly tailored clothes and haberdashery for all occasions. Our expert staff is trained to advise you in making your selection.

IT MEANS A LOT TO PLAN YOUR EXPENSES EFFICIENTLY

Your READ'S Charge Account or P.B.A., permanent budget account, provide an orderly budget-wise way to buy and build your credit. READ'S P.B.A. is the sensible way to match expenditures to your level of income . . . you buy what you need, have it to use right away, pay an agreed-on sum each month and charge more, as you pay! Inquire about easy-pay P.B.A. at our Credit Office on the fifth floor.

Congratulations . . .

Your Big Day is here! It's yours, because you have worked for and achieved something you can well be proud of. It's big . . . because though it is the end of your college years, it is also the beginning of something wonderful — your future!

What's Next?

Whether you are going on to school, or entering the business or professional world, HOWLAND'S extends to you its very best wishes for success in every venture.

You can measure the success of a man by the wardrobe he chooses. For everything in men's clothing and furnishings, HOWLAND'S has what the well-dressed man prefers.
